UNSKILFUL STREET MAKING.

Every great rainstorm shows that the making of streets without any but haphazard engineering has been an expensive business for Honolulu. Throughout the many changes of administration since thoroughfares for carriages were first laid out, street grading has been bungled and drainage regarded as of no account. Where streets have been fairly well built the work has in many cases been foredoomed by the faulty grading and utter lack of provision for carrying off storm water. It would have saved many thousand dollars a year if, say a dozen years ago, the street system had been properly graded, and side drains arched over with stone been constructed. With all subsequent extensions similarly constructed, there would not be the fearful waste of material and labor that has been caused by every freshet. It is high time that a more scientific method of street construction should be adopted. The treasury is not in a condition to undertake reconstruction and drainage of streets all over the town plot, but if there is anywhere that a specific national loan could be invested, with great and sure advantage for the future, it is in this department of public works.

OBSERVATIONS.

Michael Davitt, the Irish statesman who passed through Honolulu by the steamer Alameda, in replying to an address at Auckland delivered a striking lesson upon the modesty that ought to adorn public life. He said he felt deeply the honor they had paid him, and above all their hearty words of welcome. He would have been better pleased if they had kept to vulgar fact, and not indulged in exaggerated praise. They might take ninety-nine per cent out of what had been said about his labors for Home Rule and in the cause of Industrial Labor. That sort of thing injured public men. He hoped in New Zealand they did not deal with their public men in that style.

There is a warning up in German politics, and the popular side seems to have the Kaiser's countenance—whether from policy or not will detract nothing from the popular advantage in this particular situation.

There can be no business session of the Supreme Court until the vacancy caused by the death of First Associate Justice Bickerton has been filled. The Constitution requires that there shall be a Chief Justice and not less than two Associate Justices to constitute the Supreme Court.

There was never any question with the New Zealand Government about giving up the San Francisco mail service for the Vancouver. It only considered the Vancouver as a supplementary route, to give a fortnightly service in the Pacific to the west coast of North America. The article quoted from the San Francisco Call is simply a cheap pot-boiler for some space-writer.

When a street has been graded and confirmed it is to be presumed that the law for the prevention of obstruction of sidewalks should apply to it. There are curbed and graded sidewalks on streets leading to the water front which are completely blocked up with various private impedimenta. In the middle of one curbed sidewalk on the esplanade a tree has been allowed to grow about fifteen feet high.

THE ELEU RETURNS.

But Saw Nothing of the Missing Schooner.

The tug Eleu, commander Hilbus, moored at her usual berth at the Mail wharf at 6 o'clock this morning from four days' cruising about Kauai. She left here last Monday night and has been steaming around the Garden Isle ever since. Last night it was extremely rough, and the seas swept over the little tug continually. During the entire trip no strange vessels were sighted—only the inter-island steamers. Commander Hilbus is completely fogged out and the crew are weak from sea sickness.

Passengers on the W. G. Hall report that vessel as seeing a strange schooner off Lanai on her outward trip and the steamer put into Maalaea and notified Sheriff Andrews, who sent out a police boat in charge of Deputy Sheriff Baldwin to intercept the schooner but they could not get within reach of it. At times the schooner was so close to the Lanai shore as to be within hailing distance. The strange schooner was heading for Maui when seen last.

Captain Peterson of the Makee is quite indignant over the fable in this morning's paper alleging his reporting a strange schooner off Hanalei on his arrival in port last night. He has been bothered to death by Customs officials and others for further information. He says he saw no foreign vessels whatever during his trip to Kauai.

There is good reason to believe that the opium was landed on this island, very close to this city, and that it has all been distributed where it belongs by this time. The schooner is supposed to have gone to Kauai and kept up a lot of signalling by means of flashing lights, etc., on purpose to attract attention. When this had been accomplished the same thing was done at Lanai and Maui, the object being to draw suspicion away from Oahu in order to give those in the ring a chance to distribute the opium while the suspicion and search of the officials was diverted elsewhere. This is a very plausible theory to say the least, and many of the Hall's passengers believe it is the correct solution of the schooner's mysterious movements. It is a significant fact that on the day the Hall left the best Hongkong opium was worth $40 per pound in this market and California opium $27.50, and that both varieties were hard to obtain. Today California opium can be bought in any reasonable quantity for $15 per pound, while the price of the Hongkong article has been reduced in about the same proportion.

MEETING OF THE BAR.

To Provide for Memorial Resolutions—Bar Association Mooted.

Pursuant to a call signed by Deputy Attorney-General Alfred W. Carter, there was a meeting of members of the Bar at the Judiciary building at 11:30 o'clock this morning. Attorney-General W. O. Smith presided and A. S. Humphreys was made secretary. The object of the meeting was to arrange for the presentation of suitable resolutions on the death of First Associate Justice Bickerton.

Charles Creighton, Lorin A. Thurston and J. Lot Kaulokou were appointed a committee to draft suitable memorial resolutions in honor of the lamented jurist.

Some discussion took place as to the duties of the committee, also as to the formation of a Bar Association. While it was unanimously agreed that the Bar should organize, yet, as this meeting was called for another specific purpose, the matter was deferred and the meeting adjourned subject to the call of the chair.
